Listening One

A: Hi there!

B: Hello.

A: What can I get you today? How about some nice eggplants? They are on sale today!

B: Ehm, no thanks. I need some tomatoes to make pasta sauce.

A: Right here. Very tasty and fresh at four Euros for a kilogram.

B: Okay, I'll take two kilograms.

A: Need a bag? They are fifty cents.

B: Fifteen cents?

A: No, fifty cents.

B: Really!?! For a plastic bag? [sigh] Well, I can't carry them in my hands. Can I pay by card?

A: Sure. And how about these delicious eggplants? Great for a pasta sauce.

B: No, thank you. But I do need eggs. Do you sell eggs?

A: No, sorry.

B: Oh, ok. That's all then.

Listening Two

Ok, guys, listen up. Good work today. A couple of things before you go change. First, we've got the Chanton High School game next Wednesday on the 13th, so we need to play smart. Our last practice will be on Tuesday, but you don't need your sports bag, because we are going to watch some old Chanton games and talk about their game style. Their best player is this guy Taylor, that's T-A-I-L-O-R. He's good, but if we play as a team, we can keep him too busy to score. Ok, that's all for now. Go get changed.

Listening Three

A: Welcome to today's interview on Movie News. I'm happy to introduce Stan Dickson, director of the new movie, Danger Sign, coming out this summer.

B: It's great to be here.

A: Firstly, Stan, can I ask why you chose Paris for making your new movie?

B: Well, that's interesting because when I wrote the story, it was always going to be New York. But we changed to Europe, because we could save a lot of money. We also thought about Madrid, but most of the streets were too narrow, and Rome was too full of tourists.

A: I see. You said that you wrote it yourself.

B: Well, Shelly O'Neill and I wrote it together. Shelly is my wife.

A: I see. Did you always plan on using the actor John Suzuki for the main character, Harry?

B: Yes, right from the start. He was so awesome in Dragon Blaster.

A: Where did the idea for the Harry character come from?

B: Ok, so I grew up in a town with a lot of sports. We had national champions in baseball, basketball, and soccer. I wanted Harry to play a team sport, but John Suzuki didn't want a sport that used a ball. So, we chose his sport together.

A: Interesting. And finally, when does the movie open?

B: July seventh is the public opening day, but there are special shows just for the media on July first and second. Then, it will be released online on October 22nd.

A: Thank you, Stan Dickson. If you liked this week's show, don't forget to push the like button and comment below! See you next time!
